Award for Excellence in Teaching and Pedagogy

The Award for Excellence in Teaching and Pedagogy recognizes any teacher (lecturer, professor, graduate student, or teaching assistant) at Emory whose teaching methods, syllabi, and/or course design addresses women’s issues or matters of feminist importance with innovation and success. The award honors a teacher whose record demonstrates a willingness to bring gender issues into the classroom in creative and inspiring ways. The winner will exhibit excellence in feminist teaching and pedagogy in one or more of the following areas:

- Creating innovative approaches to teaching concepts about gender, women’s issues, or feminism at the undergraduate or graduate level through course readings, assignments, and/or class service projects.
- Successfully introducing a gendered or feminist component to class or field that does not traditionally address these issues.
- Working to create a classroom space that promotes gender equity, inclusivity, open-mindedness and critical thinking with respect to issues of gender and diversity.

The nomination materials should include specific demonstrable examples of how the nominee has contributed to one or more of the criteria listed above. Nominees need not be full time faculty and may include part-time lecturers, graduate teachers, or teaching assistants.
